APEX HORIZON BANK - RETAIL BANKING DISCLOSURE & TERMS (2026)

Document Reference: AHB-RET-2026-V4 | Effective Date: January 1, 2026

1. Executive Overview & Scope of Banking Services

Apex Horizon Bank provides comprehensive personal and retail financial services adhering to global regulatory banking frameworks. This disclosure document outlines primary retail deposit structures, interest rate schedules, fee assessments, and electronic funds governance. All accounts opened under the retail jurisdiction of Apex Horizon Bank are subjected to statutory reserve regulations and automated reporting standards.

2. Customer Identification (KYC) and Onboarding Compliance

In accordance with Anti-Money Laundering (AML) standards and Customer Due Diligence (CDD) procedures, prospective accountholders must provide verified identity documentation prior to deposit activation. Acceptable primary identification includes government-issued biometric passports, national identification identity cards, or driver licenses with full photographic verification. Secondary verification requires proof of residential domicile through registered utility statements dated within ninety (90) calendar days of initial application submission. Periodic KYC reviews occur biannually for high-risk accounts and triennially for standard retail depositors.

3. General Operating Terms for Retail Accounts

Accountholders agree to maintain active communication records with the bank, ensuring current notification addresses and mobile telephone credentials. Deposits can be executed through automated clearinghouse transfers, point-of-sale teller operations, certified corporate drafts, or secure digital portals. Funds placed into deposit accounts begin accruing applicable interest in accordance with designated product category rules from the business day of confirmed clearance.

Overdraft privileges are not automatically granted on standard deposit accounts unless an explicit revolving liquidity agreement has been countersigned by authorized credit underwriting officers. Accounts remaining without customer-initiated debit or credit activity for twenty-four (24) consecutive months shall transition automatically to dormant status for fraud protection.

4. Cheque Clearance, Electronic Wire & Immediate Settlement Operations

Domestic electronic settlements conducted through immediate payment systems (IMPS, RTP, and FedNow) operate continuously on a 24/7/365 availability calendar. Single domestic transaction caps for standard personal accounts are restricted to ,000 per transfer, with a cumulative daily threshold of ,000. Real-time gross settlement (RTGS) instructions for institutional and high-value private transactions exceeding ,000 are processed exclusively during Federal Reserve banking exchange windows (08:00 to 18:00 EST).

Physical negotiable instruments and cheques deposited via remote check capture or automated teller machine kiosks are subject to standard two-business-day verification holds. Expedited clearance protocols may be authorized for certified state payroll or governmental treasury warrants.

5. Minimum Account Balances and Maintenance Charges

Every retail product category is governed by an Average Monthly Balance (AMB) requirement. Failure to sustain the mandatory baseline balance triggers a graded service charge calculated on the percentage deficit recorded on the final calendar day of each operating cycle. For basic retail savings repositories, the baseline required AMB is established at ,000 (or equivalent local valuation). Penalty levies for non-maintenance are capped at per cycle and are automatically debited prior to statement publication.

6. Digital Banking Protocols & Multi-Factor Security Safeguards

Access to electronic banking infrastructure is fortified through cryptographic multi-factor authentication (MFA). Sessions terminating without active browser interaction after four hundred and eighty (480) seconds are terminated automatically to prohibit unauthorized local device intrusion. Customers are strictly prohibited from disclosing hardware security keys, one-time verification tokens (OTPs), or biometric passcodes to bank associates.
